New AEC Exhibit At the Laboratory

A new AEC exhibit, entitled "Atomic Quest - A search for Pictorial Excellence in the Field of Nuclear Science and Applications," is now on view at the Exhibit Hall, 26 Brookhaven Avenue, and will continue through February 10. The display, which is on tour to AEC and AEC contractor offices throughout the country, consists of outstanding photographs of people, equipment, processes and problems encountered in Atomic Energy Commission programs.

Construction Closes Cornell Avenue Sector

The sector of Cornell Avenue adjacent to the site of the Tandem Van de Graaff addition, near the north end of Technology Street, will be closed for the duration of construction.

Since heavy equipment will be stockpiled in the area and construction vehicles will be in use there, closing this section is necessary for the safety of both Laboratory employees and construction workers.

Any questions should be directed to William Barnes, Ext. 2392.

An Editorial Postscript

We present below a column appearing in the Christian Science Monitor of January 26, after its editor, Erwin Canham, had delivered a lecture at the Laboratory.

Way out

By Erwin D. Canham

Brookhaven, Long Island

I wish I understood more of what I have just seen. I've been spending an evening and a forenoon at the Brookhaven National Laboratories. Here, under the auspices of a combined effort of universities, governmentally financed, several thousand natural scientists are engaged in a wide range of research, using the most modern — and expensive — of tools which are a product of the atomic age.

Our discussions could not be technical. I was asked to speak on "The Future of the Printed Word." Inevitably, at all the meetings, we talked about the problem of communicating scientific information to the general public.

I had the feeling that the very ground I was walking on — among the scrub pines and pin oaks of Long Island — was full of nuggets of information. Here and there I could recognize some of it. My host told me of applying his chemical knowledge to the problems of archaeology and art. He had just returned from Florence, Italy, where his expertness had been used in the problem of restoring and preserving treasures. A far cry from the atomic bomb, not a direct result of the work which produced nuclear fission.

Information confirmed

He, too, confirmed information I had received elsewhere that ancient peoples possessed a great deal of knowledge. More and more of it is being identified every day. The dating of bits of pottery or glass, the analysis of its constituent elements, help give the historian and the archaeologist a greatly more accurate concept of the ancient world.

And then, quite casually, plant biologists told me of being able to increase the wheat crop in the Pacific Northwest by a factor of 20 percent. Or of inhibiting the sprouting of certain vegetables, thus preserving them longer. Or of reducing the surface bacteria of such delicacies as strawberries, thus significantly extending their freshness. Or of stopping the screw-worm pest in its tracks across the Southland by rendering the males sterile. No chemicals involved, hence no pollution problem. Strictly irradiation.

Understandable morsels

These are but a few of the morsels which a layman could understand. With more time, I am sure there would have been infinitely more. But the natural scientists had more to say. Generally, they seemed eager to accept the responsibility of communicating what they are doing. They — like every other student of knowledge — feel overwhelmed by the tide of information now pouring forth. Nobody can keep up with the scientific journals. Nobody can identify and recognize more than a little bit of the stockpile of knowledge that is building up.

"What are we going to do about it?" they asked. "How can we keep ourselves informed even in our own field, still less in other scientific fields? And how can we find time to inform the public?"

Here was a challenge to the technology of the scientific revolution itself. Better ways of classifying and coding information and of evaluating it are badly needed by the scholars. In particular, there are needed people who can communicate back and forth from one specialized field to another, with full accuracy and coherence.

Problem arises

I got the impression that there is still a tendency to speak in esoteric terms, to hoard some information, to try and preserve some monopolies. But in general it seemed to me that the duty to communicate far outweighed the instinct to hoard. The problem of special languages arises, though I think perhaps no more than in some of the social sciences like sociology, where an incredible jargon has grown up.

It is fair to conclude that what men are learning, at an increasing pace, will have effects on human living far beyond anything any one of us can imagine. Much of the fallout can be good, constructive. But it needs constant social evaluation.

Operation Clean-out, the Laboratory's effort to reduce record holdings in offices and laboratories, is rolling on in high gear. In Fiscal, for example, the response to the campaign has resulted in the release of a number of file cabinets to Supply & Materiel for laboratory use.

But we still have a long way to go. One aim of "Operation Clean-Out" is to ask each Laboratory employee to review his accumulation of records, reference material, periodicals and technical reports, and to dispose of those not required.

The objectives of "Operation Clean-Out" are two-fold:

1. To reduce by 20% the volume of records in Laboratory offices, either by destruction, or by transfer to the Laboratory Records Center.
2. To release file cabinets, bookcases, shelves, and other filing equipment for redistribution.

Let's all cooperate in "Operation Clean-Out."

The Cellular Basis of Radiation Death

Victor P. Bond
Medical Department

When human beings and other large animals receive whole-body doses of ionizing irradiation that are in the lethal range, a short period of mild or moderate symptoms is characteristically followed by several weeks of well being, the so-called "latent period." There is then a reappearance of symptoms, leading to severe illness which may have a fatal outcome.

For many years there was no good explanation for the complex phenomena observed, and many incorrect theories were proposed. Dr. Bond and his colleagues have made major contributions to a new understanding in which the lethal effects are seen to result from sequential depletion of vital components of the blood. Dr. Bond will describe the mechanism by which specific effects on certain cell lines cause radiation disease, and he will show how this knowledge leads to treatment for alleviating the disease or modifying its course.

Following the lecture, refreshments will be available in the Exhibit Hall.

'Bill of Rights' For Post Office Customers

Postmaster Steve Garrett of the Upton Post Office wishes to bring to the attention of Upton mailers the new "Postal Customer's Bill of Rights" to help meet President Johnson's government-wide goal of improving the quality of federal services to the public.

Postmaster General Lawrence F. O'Brien has ordered the Customer's Bill of Rights, directed at post office window services, implemented by two immediate steps at Upton:

1. Posters containing 10 points which specify the kind of treatment customers have a right to expect will be displayed in the post office lobby and service counters.
2. Instructions from Mr. O'Brien call for careful observance of all points in the "Postal Customer's Bill of Rights." The instructions also provide directions for the most efficient management of window services.

The posters tell customers they are entitled to:

1. A neat, clean counter on which to transact business.
2. Service by a well-groomed, neat window employee.
3. A friendly greeting that expresses a desire to assist.
4. Knowledgeable, well-informed, interested window personnel to help with postal needs.
5. Prompt, alert and efficient service.
6. Competent and correct information on inquiries.
7. An attitude that reflects helpfulness, patience and congeniality.
8. Polite referral to another window or individual, when necessary, to give the appropriate service.
9. The courtesy and tact that would be expected from a friend.
10. A feeling, upon leaving, that the post office is glad to serve and help at all times.

Mr. O'Brien stated in connection with the new postal service improvement effort:

"President Johnson insisted that every federal employee give added attention to providing the American people with the very best service possible . . . Since your daily duties brings you in direct and continuing contact with our customers, I would like to tell you what I consider the type of service the American people have a right to expect when dealing with the largest business operation in the world."

Mountain Club

At the annual meeting of the Mountain Club on February 6 in the Recreation Building at 3 p.m., Dr. Robert Merriam of The State University at Stony Brook will give a talk entitled "Original Climbs in the Tetons." Dr. Merrimam was formerly with the Exum Mountain School in the Grand Teton National Park as a climbing guide and instructor.

Also, there will be an election of officers and a vote on the constitution.

All interested persons are welcome to attend.

An Evening of Experimental Cinema

In recent years, the use of cinema as a medium for other than mere storytelling has become well recognized. Indeed, the so-called "underground cinema" now is regularly exhibited at film festivals and commercial theatres. When experimental films were first offered to the public, however, their very purpose, integrity and seriousness were openly questioned by many. They were at times considered scandalous, fraudulent, or irrelevant.

Thursday's program will present ten experimental films produced primarily by independent artists ranging in subject from the erotic to the sociological, from the technical to the humorous. Offered as significant efforts to broaden the scope of the film medium and further develop its aesthetic vocabulary and potential, these films express the psychological and emotional tensions of modern life; delve into the subconscious; explore the world of color and abstract images; experiment with cinematic devices and synthetic sound. They were produced primarily for adult audiences. As in any art form the attitudes and experiences brought by the viewer determine to a large extent his appreciation and opinion.

Bring your imagination and be prepared for a fascinating evening.
—Harvard Lyman

Musical in Rehearsal

Remember these dates:
April 21, 22, 28, 29

Already in rehearsal, the Theatre Group's first full orchestra production - The Roar of the Greasepaint, The Smell of the Crowd - promises to be a very special event.

The Newley wit makes for a hilarious theatre evening, and songs such as "Who Can I Turn To?", "A Wonderful Day Like Today," "The Joker" and "Feeling Good" are already some of our most beloved standards.

Anyone interested in joining the production staff should contact Carol Roberts, Ext. 325.

Musicians

The orchestra still needs some musicians, especially on harp; guitar and banjo; violin; clarinet and bassoon. Anyone interested should get in touch with Dave Seewald, Musical Director at Ext. 613.
