RHIC/AGS 2015 Poster Design Competition

- Winning Design: Chenxin “Cassie” Yang, Pratt Institute
 - Advisor: Agnes Mocsy, Pratt Institute

This year we had an interesting collaboration between Arts, Science, and Education in the making of the Poster we use to advertise the 2015 RHIC/AGS User’s Meeting.

Instead of relying on the usual mostly Physicist-design ideas, a Poster Design Contest was held at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn, NY amongst Arts and Graphics Design students. These students learned about the nuclear physics performed at RHIC and competed with original designs for our poster layout, based on their artistic interpretations of what they learned.

The winning design was submitted by Chenxin Yang, who also goes by “Cassie”. Cassie is here today, and her design is indeed what you’ve seen all around the lab and which have been sent out to institutions all over the US. We like to thank and congratulate Cassie for what is certainly the most artistic and beautiful poster design we’ve had in years if not ever for the Annual User’s Meeting poster. Please join me in congratulating Cassie as she receives her award of $300!
