French Film on Monday, April 4

Casque d'Or, the last French film of the current series is set in the underworld of Paris fifty years ago. This film is based on the story of a famous gigolette, Marie, called "Casque d'Or" because of her beautiful golden hair. A woman of great beauty, she lived among the "apaches", surrounded by murder, hate and revenge. She had many lovers, but loved only one man. The director, Jacques Becker, asked to describe the tone of the picture, put it this way: "It lies somewhere between the writer Eugene Sue and the painter Renoir. Eugene Sue - because, like so much that he wrote, the film shows the grimmer suburbs of Paris, and bloody battles under gaslight in the early days of the century. Renoir - because of the roadside dance cafes, the lovely banks of the Marne, and the Sunday when one could convince oneself of happiness." Simone Signoret received the British Film Academy's "Oscar" for her superb performance in Casque d'Or.

Produced and directed in 1952 by Jacques Becker with a cast including Simone Signoret, Claude Dauphin and Serge Reggiani.
