THEATRE GROUP DELIVERS THE "MALE"

By Dick Botts

Without any help from the Post Office Department, the BERA Theatre Group delivered the "Male" last Thursday and Friday evenings to the entire satisfaction of large appreciative audiences.

The "Male", Tommy Turner, was the hero of Thurber and Nugent's comedy, "The Male Animal", and the character was portrayed by Andrew McReynolds with a self-assurance worthy of a professional.

The play concerns the troubles, matrimonial and political, of a mouselike college professor who finally, with the aid of some liquid stimulation, decides that the male animal fights for his mate. His ineffectual attempts to become a roaring lion, entirely out of character, furnish many amusing scenes. Beneath his usually calm exterior, even when sober, lurks a fighting spirit and he defies the college trustees in the last act. A reconciliation with his wife ends the play.

Both McReynolds and Dorothy Fiala, who was cast in the role of Mrs. Turner, turned in convincing portrayals of the characters they represented.

The supporting cast apparently had been selected with care, as they fitted their assumed roles to

BOOKS ON BERA RENTAL LIBRARY SHELVES

"POINT OF NO RETURN" by John F. Marquand--

Close reading of Marquand's novels will furnish future historians with a broad picture of small town middle class life in America in the first half of the twentieth century. His latest book follows the life and fortunes of Charles Gray. In the opening chapters, Charles is an assistant vice-president of an old, well-established bank, and is concerned with his chances of succeeding to the open position of vice-president. Another vice-president has the same aspirations and neither one feels secure in their chances for advancement.

Charles is married and has two children, teen age. His wife, Nancy, was formerly a secretary in a law office and she is as worried as is Charles about the hoped for promotion. After a few chapters, the story flashes back to Clyde, Vermont, and Charles' life in the small town. The social positions of small town inhabitants, the class distinctions drawn between people who live on Spruce Street, and those who live on Johnson Street, are clearly outlined.

Charles' reasons for leaving his position in a local firm to seek work in Boston and New York become apparent as the story develops: his father's rise to wealth and then sudden failure and suicide, his love affair with Jessica Lovell, the daughter of a Johnson Street resident whose father opposes the match, and many other incidents that make life in Clyde unbearable for him.

In the end, Charles finds that his worries about his hoped for promotion have been needless, as the bank president, Tony Burton, has never considered anyone else for the position.

The closing pages leave Charles and Nancy mentally buying a larger house, a new Buick, and planning to live up to the dignity of the new position. The book has humor, satire, drama and sadness, and will appeal to all readers. Everyone will be able to see their own struggles, hopes and disappointments in the story of Charles Gray, as most of us have our own "Clyde" and have at sometime reached a "Point of No Return".

perfection and their acting was better than is expected in amateur performances.

A successful theatrical presentation depends a lot on many off-stage workers and a pleasing, smooth running play is the result of the efforts of the Director, the scene designers and builders, and many others. They all deserve a part of the credit for this latest offering of the Theatre Group.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO GIVE SOME NEEDY CHILD A VACATION?

The Herald Tribune Fresh Air Fund, through its Bellport Friendly Town Committee, is looking for responsible families interested in providing a two-weeks vacation for a needy child.

The plan is one whereby people who live in the country invite as family guests to their homes, during the school vacation, needy boys and girls from the low-income areas of New York City.

Youngsters between six and twelve may be invited for the two weeks beginning August 5th. The Fund pays railroad fare and takes care of escorting arrangements and expenses. Hosts may specify the approximate age and sex of the child desired.

For further information, call Mrs. A.B.W. Anderson at Bellport 424.
