Film Study Group Presents

The Bicycle Thief

October 26

Directed by Vittorio De Sica - the names in the cast wouldn't mean anything to you because the players were chosen by De Sica from the people he found around him as he started filming his story on the streets of Rome. It tells of a man and his son and their search for the bicycle that had been stolen from him just when he needed it to help him get a job. It's funny and exciting and sad. "Best foreign film of the year" -

Man of Aran

November 16

Robert Flaherty, who filmed "Nanook of the North" and "Louisiana Story", made this movie about life in the western isles off the coast of Ireland. He believed in letting the story for his documentaries evolve out of the life of the locale, in letting the camera tell its own story. His cast consisted of the Aran Islanders, the island and the sea. This is a classic in film-making. "Fiddle de Dee", an experiment in camera cartooning, will be shown with it.
