André Maurois Pegram Lectures To Be Presented by Jacques Barzun

André Maurois is to be remembered as one of the great Men of Letters. Equally famous as an historian, biographer, novelist and essayist, he also had successful careers as a diplomat and teacher. When the decision was made to invite him to be the 1967 Pegram Lecturer, he was approached with both a sense of urgency and anxiety, for his advanced age made it apparent that there was but limited time left to share in his intelligence and human wit. His continued vitality was amply indicated, however, by the quality of his late writing and the vivacity of his continued occasional appearances on French radio and television.

In September of last year, as he was preparing to leave for Brookhaven, Maurois' physician insisted upon corrective surgery. Maurois was much concerned that this operation would prevent him from meeting his speaking commitment, and wrote that his manuscript was completed, and that he would be glad to send it here for reading. The decision was made, though, to delay the lectures in the hope he could eventually be with us. M. Maurois seemed pleased with this arrangement, and in his last letter, written minutes before he left for the hospital, he expressed again his willingness to forward his manuscript and his hope to be with us this spring. To the sadness of all here and of the world, he did not survive the surgery.

Subsequently, M. Maurois' family has graciously honored his commitment and has forwarded his manuscript, in all probability his last work for publication in English and presentation at Brookhaven. When sending the manuscript, his son, Gerald Maurois, wrote, "I must tell you how much my father was looking forward to going to Brookhaven. The prospect of the trip made him spend a very joyous summer and at 82 he showed signs of the enthusiasm of a much younger man, until alas his fateful illness and operation."

Two eminent intellectual leaders, Jacques Barzun, The University Professor at Columbia University, and Edouard Morot-Sir, the Representative of French Universities in the United States and the Cultural Counselor of the French Embassy, who were both friends and associates of M. Maurois, have agreed to present the lectures to the Brookhaven audience. The oral presentation will be abbreviated in

Dear Professor Sayre

Many thanks for your kind letters. I must leave my home for the hospital in five minutes. Therefore I have no time to type the lectures typed. I shall do it as soon as I shall be back here (about one month) and send them on to you. I hope I'll be able to deliver them in the spring.

Yours sincerely

André Maurois

Dear Professor Sayre:

Many thanks for your kind letters. I must leave my home for the hospital in five minutes. Therefore, I have no time to have the lectures typed. I shall do it as soon as I shall be back here (about one month) and send them on to you. I hope I'll be able to deliver them in the Spring.

Yours sincerely,

order that the lectures can be presented within two evenings rather than the three originally intended. M. Morot-Sir will speak first in appreciation and memory of Maurois, and Professor Barzun will present the lectures themselves. The complete Maurois manuscript will be published this summer.

The lectures will be presented in the Brookhaven Theater at 8:30 on the evenings of Monday, May 13 and Wednesday, May 15. All Brookhaven employees, their families and friends are invited to attend. Tickets, for which there is no charge, may be obtained by returning the request forms about to be distributed or by contacting the Director's Office, Ext. 2357.

André Maurois entitled his lectures, "The Illusions, 1) The Illusions of the Senses and of the Sentiments, 2) The Illusions of Science, 3) Willful Illusions or the Fine Arts." They are entertaining and thought provoking in the tradition of French philosophical thought.

74th BNL Lecture on Superconducting Magnets

Dr. William B. Sampson of the Accelerator Department will deliver the 74th Brookhaven Lecture on Wednesday, May 1 at 8 p.m. in the Lecture Hall.

Dr. Sampson was born in Toronto, Canada, in 1934. He was a student at the University of Toronto which awarded him a Ph.D in physics in 1962. During his years as a graduate student, he developed his very considerable skill in the design and construction of difficult experimental apparatus by undertaking the detection of free radicals produced in water by high energy protons. This involved the construction and use of an electron spin resonance spectrometer, a very challenging task for a graduate student. 4-1600-68

William B. Sampson

Soon after his arrival at Brookhaven, Dr. Sampson became interested in the possibility of building and using superconducting magnets for a variety of applications. He speedily made the decision to concentrate on niobium-tin, now the most exciting of superconductors in its capacity for sustaining very high magnetic fields. At the time, niobium-tin was regarded as a very difficult material to fabricate and use, but Sampson assisted industry, particularly RCA, in the development and testing of niobium-tin ribbon which now is commercially available. Using this ribbon Sampson and his group have designed and built a variety of advanced and useful magnets. In a relatively short time, the Brookhaven group under Sampson's leadership has developed a well-deserved international reputation and continues to hold a leading position in the field of development of superconducting devices.

A buffet supper will be served at the Brookhaven Center before the lecture from 6 to 8 p.m. Refreshments will be available in the Exhibit Hall after the lecture.

Nuclear Week in New York Proclaimed

Aboard the Nuclear Ship Savannah at a pier in the Hudson River, Oliver Townsend, (left) Chairman of the New York State Atomic and Space Development Authority read a proclamation signed by Governor Rockefeller naming the week of May 18-26 as Nuclear Week in New York. With Townsend are Dr. John Dunning, (center) Dean of the School of Engineering, Columbia University and Dr. Maurice Goldhaber, (right) Director of BNL. Both Dunning and Goldhaber are members of the Board of Directors of Nuclear Week in New York.

Take Home Pay To Rise As Result of Changes In Retirement Program

Yesterday, Dr. Maurice Goldhaber, Director of BNL, sent a memorandum to employees announcing two significant changes in the AUI retirement plan - a reduction in the employee's required contribution and an increase in the Laboratory's contribution. The net result of these changes will be an increase in the take-home pay for participating employees.

At present the employee and Laboratory contribution rates are as follows:

Annual Salary	Employee Contribution	Laboratory Contribution
First $3000	2.5%	7.5%
Next $1200	5.0%	7.5%
Over $4200	7.5%	7.5%

Beginning June 1, 1968, the employee and Laboratory contribution rates will be:

Annual Salary	Employee Contribution	Laboratory Contribution
First $7800	2.5%	10.0%
Over $7800	7.5%	10.0%

With the new contribution rates, the employee's required contribution on his first $7800 in base annual salary will be reduced from $405 to $195. This will result in a $210 increase in take-home pay for all participating employees earning $7800 or more.

The Laboratory's contribution will be increased from the current 7½% to an amount equal to 10% of the employee's total base salary. Using the same $7800 base annual salary, the Laboratory's contribution will increase from $585 per year to $780 per year.

The new changes were recommended by the AUI Board of Trustees, which recently re-examined the Laboratory's retirement benefits program.

In addition to the long range benefits, the new contribution rates will accomplish two immediate objectives: (1) they will shift more of the cost of the retirement plan to the Laboratory, thereby resulting in increased take-home pay for all participating employees, and (2) they will more than offset all increases in Social Security taxes currently scheduled from now through 1987. The new employee contribution schedule has been adjusted to the current maximum earnings base of $7800 for Social Security (FICA) taxes.

In addition, arrangements are currently being made to enable employees to make additional contributions to their retirement plan through regular payroll deductions. Further information on this procedure, plus more details of the retirement changes will appear in future articles in the Bulletin Board. In the meantime, if there are any questions, call Monroe Petty, Personnel Services, Extension 2106.

Russian Bio-Med Scientists at BNL

Last week a group of six bio-medical scientists who are in this country for a conference at the UN visited the Medical and Biology Departments at Brookhaven. April 16 . . . I apologize for not writing before this, but we have all been fully occupied in preparing for the official opening of the Exhibit in Taipei, Republic of China, on Saturday, April 13. Contrary to superstition, it was a lucky day in that all the ceremonies went off well, and the weather cooperated with a cool, pleasant breeze, enough to impart a brave flutter to the Chinese and American flags as they were raised on the twin flagpoles.

This time I was relieved to see that the flags were the same size. I have been apprehensive ever since our exhibit at Utrecht in the Netherlands, when the Stars and Stripes opened out and were found to be about three times as large as the Dutch flag. Later, while apologizing for this inadvertent ugly-Americanism to a Dutch scientist, he responded graciously, "Don't worry about it. After all, your country is many times bigger than ours."

The weather has been delightful since my arrival on April 5, though quite hot during the day. In fact, just about the time I stepped off the plane, a 35-day continuous downpour came to an end. This is a little uncanny, since the same thing has happened at all the exhibits I have attended previously. Perhaps that is why the AEC requests me to serve. However, I will put it down to nothing but pure coincidence. I am not planning to attempt walking on the water for a while.

So far I have not had the opportunity to see anything of the countryside, though from the air, it is a beautiful island, as its original Spanish name of Formosa would indicate. It is very mountainous, and the interior is densely forested; from here comes the camphor wood for which Taiwan is famous.

Taipei is a big bustling, dusty city, its streets swarming with Japanese-built taxis, bicycles, motorcycles, and sundry odd pedal-operated vehicles, also some heavily loaded bullock carts from the outlying farms. This city is also notable for its odors, a few of which are pleasant, the rest otherwise. Piggeries scattered around the housing areas don't help the situation on a warm day. But there is not a beggar or panhandler to be seen, and everyone appears to be well-dressed, well-fed, and reasonably happy. Also, they have been invariably courteous, kind and friendly with us. I must admit I would gladly suffer a few more ripe smells in the U.S. in return for such consistently gracious and charming people.

The Mandarin Hotel where I am staying is modern and comfortable; each room is equipped with radio, air conditioner, and small refrigerator. I have a magnificent view of the city from the tenth floor, where several other U.S. members of the Exhibit staff are also located. But, surprisingly, the hotel is infested with rats, that scurry around noisily in the walls and air vents. In fact, on my first morning here I awoke to find one peering under the door at me, but a well-aimed shoe informed him that he was unwelcome, and he hasn't been around since.

When I was in the mainland of China in 1937, I developed a keen enthusiasm for the local cuisine, and it is a great pleasure to be back again with genuine Chinese cooking. We have already been invited to several formidable feasts by local Government groups, and of all the savory dishes served, I have yet to find one I did not find delectable.

We have many styles of cooking to choose from: Cantonese, Shanghai, Szechuan, and others I have not encountered before. Among the offerings which seem exotic oddities by our uneducated standards are seaweed, bird's nests, shark fins, black mushrooms, various species of fungus, quail eggs, and jellyfish. The last really surprised me. It was quite chewy in texture, and is considered, rightfully to my taste, to be a special delicacy. But I won't try to cook one of our Great South Bay jellyfish upon my return; they must be a very different creature from the variety served up here.

Today we are having a visit from Madame Chiang-Kai Shek, some of her retinue, and U.S. Embassy ladies, so I must abandon these random notes, in the hope that they will be of some interest to my many BNL friends, for more pressing demands. More later.

Rakenius to Retire

Rudolph C. Rakenius, a Technical Specialist in the Physics Department, will retire this Tuesday after 17 years of working at Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Rudy started work in 1951 for the Instrumentation and Health Physics Department. He worked on the layout and building of the Merlin computer, and when that job was finished, transferred to the Physics Department and worked on the development of hodoscopes, scintillation counters and spark chambers.

A week after he retires, Rudy and his wife will visit their daughter in Houston, Texas, to see their five grandchildren before taking off on a hunt for translucent minerals all over the United States. On the road, they will live in a new VW camper that is fully equipped with CB radio, TV, refrigerator, and all living equipment. In between transcontinental jaunts, Rudy and his wife will call Mt. BERA Film Series

The Knack

Directed by Richard Lester, starring Rita Tushingham, Michael Crawford and Donal Donnelly. The fine art of la seduction, as the French put it, or the knack, as the British prefer it, is wittily, wackily, hilariously illustrated in this prizewinning comedy. It is absolute nonsense - unpredictable, joyful, ecstatically and wildly imaginative in its fun as Ray Brooks (who has the knack) tries to teach it to his pal Michael Crawford (who hasn't) using naive, suspicious Rita Tushingham as the subject of their endeavors. Lester's direction is frenetic; the pace never lets up in this fresh approach to an old topic.

What A Difference A Cedilla Makes

The Bible and Webster's New International Dictionary are probably the best known and most widely used books in the world. Unfortunately, the Good Book makes no positive statement regarding the cedilla. So, we have turned to Webster and found the following: "... A mark under the letter C . . . to show it is to be sounded like S . . ."

Standard typographic equipment absolutely prohibits use of this neglected

These three ladies have something to sing about. They've finally figured out how to catch and hold on to a man. No longer "3 bored wives," they are (l. to r.) Elaine Rowland, Virginia Walker, and Catharine Wingate.

symbol. And, as a result, confusion, boarding on cataclysmic, has crept into our mother tongue. For example, take Facade . . . how many of you have been tempted to say "fakade" as in lemonade . . . or worse yet, "fakady" as in lemonady. But no. Somewhere in our collective unconscious we rebel, and due to very certain uncertainties, we choose not to speak the word at all! But shame, the word must be spoken. Now all together, keep in mind that unprintable cedilla that makes the c an s and complete the following rhyming quiz. Hint - All the correct answers rhyme with each other and Facade.

1. If you wait till May 1 to buy your tickets to Facade, it will be (easy, hard) to obtain good seats.
2. One of the major authors of Facade was not (The Bard, Ann Leonard).
3. You will feel (happy, odd) to be left out of all conversations in Suffolk County of people who have seen Facade.
4. Only a (clod, genius) would even think of missing this once-in-a-lifetime celebration.

You have not reached the epitome of achievement. The battle is won. And you will win when you see Facade on May 3, 4, 9, 10, or 11.

By the way, Webster's indicates the presence of a cedilla under the "c" in the word "cedilla." But that's another story.

The younger half of the father and son team in Facade is Ricky Brown. Ricky is an 18 year old senior at Bay Shore High School. He has just been accepted at Fredonia State College as a voice and music major. A word of caution is in order: Pop, watch out.

Director Ron Peierls rehearses Lorraine Kahane in a scene from Facade. They're surrounded by one of the most exciting and ingenious sets ever to be built on our stage. Set designer is Paul Kelly, who's imagination defines talent and artistry. Photos by Meyn

Biology Wins Title

About 100 players and spectators were present at the Gym last Thursday night to ring down the curtain on the Brookhaven Basketball season. They were treated to two exciting games and free refreshments.

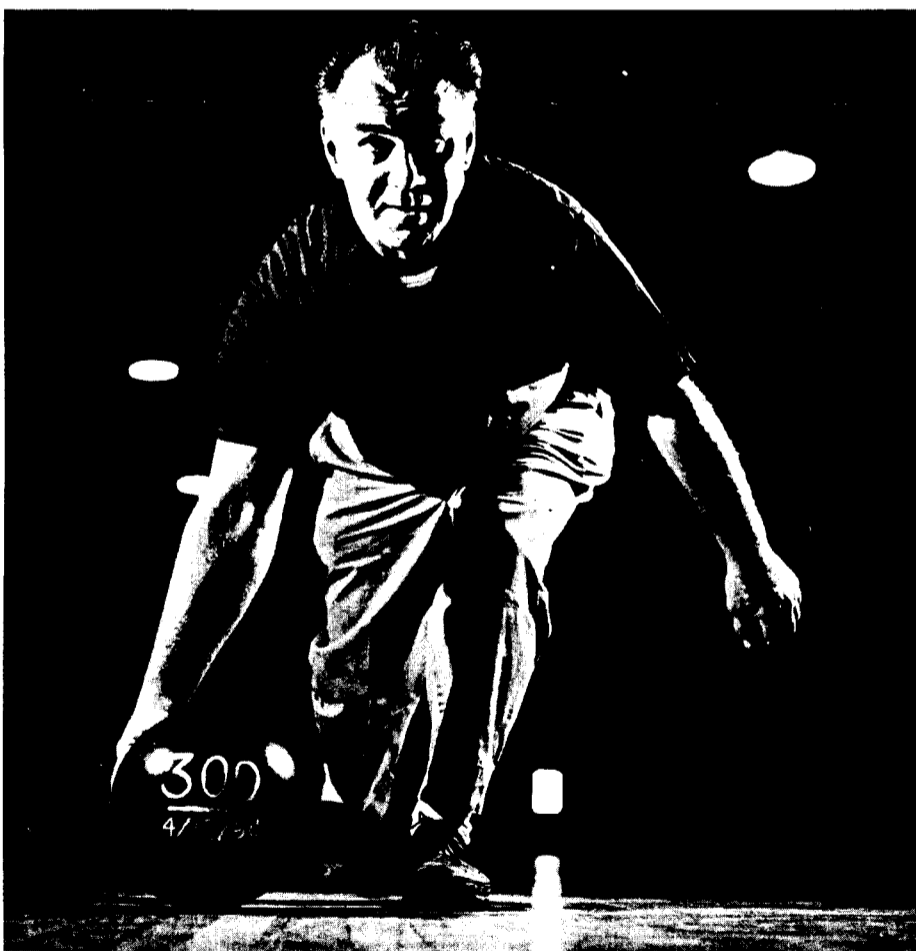

In the Associated League, Applied Math, which had won both halves during the regular season, played an all-star team from the other teams in the league. The All-Stars were ahead by only one point 31-30 at half time, but their bench depth allowed them to run away with the game in the second half, to win 65-45. All-Star coach, Mike Zguris, while only scoring two points, did a good job by putting the right men in at the right time. Jim Hooper had 18 points, Scott Garrett - 14, and Larry Johnson - 10 for the All-Stars. For Applied Math, Jake Leventhal scored 16 points, Les Lawrence had 12, and Steve Lewkowitz 9.

The Universities League game featured first half winner, Biology, against second half winner, Medical. Biology won 45-42 after Medical had closed the gap to one point with a minute to play. Nick Combatti led the Biology attack with 18 points, with Bill Studier and Jack Van't Hof contributing 14 and 8 points respectively. Ed Gill and Tomsam (sic) Miller had 15 points apiece for Medical.

A Hard One To Beat

Last Friday at Maggio's Alleys in Patchogue, Mike Iarocci, a sheet metal worker in Plant Engineering and Planning, bowled the score that is hard to beat.

It was during a roll-off for the Purple League championship that Mike scored his 300 game. Another member of Mike's team, Vincent Felice, came close this past fall when he scored a 299. S & M was pitted against Fiscal for the championship of the Purple League.

Mike bowled on alleys 5 and 6, the same alleys used by Felice for his 299 game. After four clean strikes, the fifth strike was a bit sloppy, but all the pins obligingly fell. From the fifth to the twelfth frame, Mike had an audience that watched every ball he threw.

"I wasn't shook up when I reached the twelfth frame," said Mike, "the eleventh frame was a pocket hit, but the last one was on the Jersey side." There was never any doubt. All the pins fell, and BNL had a new bowling record, a 300 game.

This was the first 300 game bowled at Maggio's during its 28 years of existence.

The following two games of the series were a disappointment to the S & M team, as they ended up losing to Fiscal for the League championship. Mike, who has an average of 169, bowled a 159 in the second game, and a 172 in the last game.

When Mike returned home after bowling, carrying the bottle of champagne presented to him at the alleys, he didn't tell his wife about the 300 game until an hour later. "I told her that we lost the series to Fiscal," he said, "and then later I told her about the 300 game."

There will be many awards coming to Mike for his 300 game, but the best of all is that he can never be beaten, only tied.
